

THE LONDON

London Bread & Cake, London Borough of Enfield and Primary Authority

Dear David,

I write with regard to your Primary Authority partnership, formed between London Bread & Cake and London Borough of Enfield - in particular to thank you and your team for your involvement and commitment to this new and important development in how regulation is delivered to businesses that trade across the UK.

LBRO has been established by government to ensure improvements in the delivery of local regulation are achieved. Primary Authority is at the heart of that. It establishes a statutory framework for the development of constructive partnerships between businesses and their local council. The council acts as a single source of authoritative advice on regulatory issues providing you with the confidence and assurance that all other council regulators must act consistently with the advice you receives. They also oversee all compliance and inspection activity for your businesses, helping to reduce administrative burdens.

Adam St John Clarke, your Technical Managers, and Christopher Hall, your Assistant Technical Managers have both made a major contribution to enable London Bread & Cake to be ready for nomination and have worked constructively with LBRO. My executive team has praised both Adams's and Christopher's commitment to ensuring London Bread & Cake can benefit from this important development in local regulation.

Yours sincerely

Clive Grace
